The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution states: “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.” Clearly, the second, third and fifth amendments to the Constitution have precedence over the first. In fact, the first amendment’s Establishment Clause – which makes no mention of any other amendment – has been ruled unconstitutional. I doubt most readers are familiar with the Supreme Court’s seminal decision, the Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye v. City of Hialeah, Inc. The case began with a 1990 class action lawsuit brought by a group of California residents, Hialeah, Inc., a Christian-based corporation, and a group of individuals on behalf of about 1,000 members of the Afro-Cuban faith in Hialeah, Florida. The complaint alleged that the city, city commissioners and city council members had violated their members’ free exercise of their religion by discriminating against them in the distribution of municipal services and facilities, including police services, fire department services and ambulance services. The city’s refusal to pay for the Afro-Cubans’ requested ambulance service was based on a discriminatory religious-based provision that prohibited payment of services to anyone who was “primarily engaged in the business of providing religious materials, counseling or instruction for religious purposes to those enrolled in religious organizations.” Under the prayer-in-schools laws of the city, Hialeah and the city commissioners could not establish, support or conduct a public school that taught prayer or the reading of the Bible. The city also prohibited public servants from engaging in “conduct that is contrary to an individual’s religious belief.” (You can read a copy of the original decision here.) The city council voted to deny the Afro-Cubans’ request for an ambulance based on a report by the city’s assistant fire chief, who said the prayer-in-schools laws were a “fence around the city’s constitutional prohibition against religious discrimination.” The religious discrimination provision held that the city could not pay for or engage in activities that were contrary to religious beliefs held by the city’s religious organizations. The chief didn’t want to have to ♦

Q: How do you round numbers in MySQL I have some numbers I'd like to round down but rounding 3.3 to 3 is using too many decimals (I need 3). Is there an easy way to round down 3.3 as you'd round down 3.1? A: One way: `SELECT ((:number_as_int / :number_as_float):float + 0.00001)` For MySQL, use: `SELECT (((:number_as_int / (CAST(:number_as_float as float) + 0.00001))) + 0.00001)`

[Assessment of responsiveness in patients with mitral stenosis by mitral valve area]. To assess the responsiveness of mitral valve area (MVA) to changes in symptoms in patients with mitral stenosis (MS) after the start of beta-blocker therapy and to investigate the changes of MVA during follow-up. Totally 100 patients (age, 46 +/- 14 year) with MS (mitral area 25 mmHg) on a stable dose of atenolol were studied. MVA was calculated as the mean transmitral gradient/pressure half time ratio. All patients received beta-blocker treatment initially. At a mean follow-up period of 44 months, a repeat non-invasive echocardiography was performed. The follow-up echocardiography showed significant changes in the mitral valve anatomy and function. The MVA decreased significantly from 0.80 +/- 0.32 cm² at baseline to 0.60 +/- 0.21 cm² at follow
