This is an easy-to-use and handy app to password-protect files and folders. It displays the path of files or folders, their size, their status (locked or unlocked), as well as a list of actions that you can perform: safely open the file, unprotect a file or remove it from the list. It also hides files from File Explorer and other programs. Password protection supports one user account per file/folder, it can be launched from the main File Explorer window or by clicking on the icon displayed on the desktop. All the files and folders are password-protected with a single click. All the hidden or protected files and folders become accessible under a password only. If you forget the password, a "Forgotten password" window opens in which you can type the password to unlock the account. Easy to use and protect your files. The simple interface allows you to easily filter or list the files you need to protect. And thanks to the convenient preview function, you can preview the files before locking them. All your files are hidden or protected and not even the owner can access it. As soon as you forget the password, this window opens. And once you type the new password, the files will be unlocked. You can also hide files or directories from File Explorer and other programs. This feature enables you to prevent other people from accessing those files, or to make sure that they cannot modify or remove those files/folders. Supports One User per Password Per Folder/File, it can be launched from the main File Explorer window or by clicking on the icon displayed on the desktop. "We're going to be leaving," he told one family member in an urgent phone call. With his four children in tow, the father of the 32-year-old victim told the dispatcher that the group was on its way to the family's home in Millington, Mich., and wanted to "stay there." The family's home sits atop one of the first barrier islands to form when the Big Sandy River leaves the western slopes of the Appalachians. It's a few miles west of the small lakes in the center of the island, the family said. "My sister asked him what he meant," said a relative, who identified only herself as DeAnna. An early morning police hunt, led by nearby officers, was fruitless, making way for an equally intense search of the island late Wednesday night, with residents rallying at barricades manned by police. Their search found only tire tracks and some other footprints. The Tennessee Bureau of Investigation joined in the search, sending the remote-controlled "K-9" robot and a SERT team (search and emergency response team) to search the area. But with little success, on Thursday morning, state troopers stayed on watch while the family returned to their home, which DeAnna described as a trailer. "We◆
