“The new game engine contains an extra layer of power that we can use to bring the player closer to his real-life behavior as well as giving the players speed and acceleration,” said Craig Dunlop, FIFA Game Director. “Our ambition is to continue to progress from the graphics and gameplay mechanics found in previous FIFA iterations to bring players a more connected, interactive and immersive football experience.” Before the release of FIFA 22, Dunlop brought FIFA 19 to Game Developers Conference (GDC) and EA’s presentations at the event received widespread acclaim. Gameplay improvements in FIFA 22 are part of EA’s ongoing commitment to evolve and enrich the FIFA community.
