Photo: RNZ / Rachel Graham The university says a combined-cycle solar and gas power plant has been operating for about a month and is generating about 34 megawatts of power and enough to power about 9,000 homes. The plant is three times as powerful as any solar system in the world, and is the largest of its kind in the Southern Hemisphere. The university's new Energy Innovation Hub, which is in development, will have the capability to turn other large projects into reality. "It's exciting that in just a few months our project has already produced significantly more energy than any of the world's top power stations," Mr Nick Murray, Waikato's director of energy, said. The university's centre aims to reduce carbon emissions, and is expected to help reduce annual greenhouse gas emissions by more than 6,000 tonnes. The project is being funded by the Ministry for Business, Innovation and Employment's $5 million EIA Research and Innovation Fund.Aplicação do segundo turno foi antecipada no 8º andar do prédio do TSE, em Brasília, nesta segunda-feira (15). FIFA 13 Crack Portable - App Update 1.0.3.1 CrackedQ: Why does this recursion generate a stack overflow in C? Given an array of characters, reverse the array. You should use functions, not the built-in reverse functions. Note: 1. A recursive function is defined as a function that calls itself, passing a modified parameter, e.g. print_function(func(array,i)) where array is the original array and i is the current position. 2. A function with side-effects is defined as one that modifies its argument, e.g. print_func(array,i) where array is the original array and i is the current position. Input 1: Enter the size of the array: 3 Enter the original characters in the array: abc Output 1: reverse the array abc Here is my program. I am able to get the expected output for the input but am confused about why it generates a Stack Overflow Error. I have spent hours trying to solve this and I am now posting this question. I will be thankful if any one can help me with this.

#include #include void reverse(char arr[],int l,int r,int size) { if (l==r) { printf("reversing... "); printf("original array:"); for (int i=0;i < size;i++) printf("%c",arr[i]); }
