The correct command to fix this would be `gedit`. The rest of the instructions are standard, so I'll just repeat that here: `gedit` will open up a text document, so you now want to edit your `geditrc` file with the following: `gedit ~/.config/gedit/geditrc`. If you don't know where this file is, or how to open it up, then you need to go to your home folder (which I think is the `bin/desktop` equivalent) and open it up from there. You can do that by navigating to your home folder in the location bar and typing in `~`, press `enter`. Once you're in there, go to your home folder location and open the `config` folder from there. If you don't know how to do that, you'll have to read more tutorials, I can't do that. Now you'll want to open up `gedit` and scroll down to the very bottom (the last part of the file) and you should see the option in there to open it with `gedit`, it will look something like this: `# on start, run gedit (i.e. -w) /usr/bin/gedit %s`. Change the second to third line to look like this, replacing the `/usr/bin/gedit` with what is on your desktop (if your desktop is different, change that to match): `gedit`. You now need to hit `CTRL+X` to quit `gedit`, then it should open up your file with text highlighted and change all of the `/usr/bin/gedit` options to `gedit`. Also make sure you find out where to find the `geditrc` file on your desktop. When the Eiffel Tower was added to the list of world heritage sites in 2000, it was a source of hope that the oldest living structure could join the shortlist of mankind's masterpieces. By the time it was added to the world heritage list in 2008, another 184 countries had recognized its significance. But despite having nothing to do with the Parisian "touche" du Millenium, the monument was nevertheless a casualty of that failed countdown to the next "great one". In the name of the European Union, it became embroiled in a dispute between France and Germany. Since then it has existed in a legal limbo - neither a UNESCO heritage site, nor a German

A: The problem is the search pattern you're using: '/5secondsofsummeralbumtorrentdownload That pattern is only going to work for files that end with 5secondsofsummeralbumtorrentdownload. If you have a good filename, use that. For example: path = os.path.join(os.path.abspath(__file__), '..', '..', 'sources') pattern = '(\\w+).*\\.epub' for root, dirs, files in os.walk(path): for name in files: match = re.match(pattern, name) if match: with open(os.path.join(root, name)) as f: print(name, f.read()) For each.epub file, it prints the path to it and its contents.
