I have a worksheet named "Analyses" (this is the name of my worksheet I want to copy the values) and the name of the other worksheet is "Analyses". I want to copy this fields of "Analyses" into "Analyses" named "Code". I tried this, but it doesn't work: Range("A2").Select Selection.Copy Sheets("Analyses").Select Range("A16").Select ActiveSheet.Paste A: In your case you can simply write like this, Range("A2").Copy Destination:=Sheets("Analyses").Range("A16") New book: Terrorism financing and emerging markets Introduction Terrorism financing is the financing of terrorists through the financial sector. This is a global phenomenon and traditional anti-money laundering (AML) control frameworks are not sufficient to deal with it. Within the last two years, the police and the intelligence services have made some very important seizures of funds or equipment which indicate that terrorist financing in emerging markets is going to be of great concern for some time. A recent report (The Global Counter-Terror Financing Report 2014, CEPS - Wellcome Trust) reveals many interesting details. This report shows the way in which new structures in emerging markets may be facilitating laundering of money or concealing terrorist financing.

Sandra So, after all that, what is my conclusion? I'm glad to see that HP is focusing on quality, supporting open source, and continuing to develop their line of Internet appliances. I'm impressed with the wireless solutions and the Fanax Q6600H (I have the Q6500D) that they demonstrated. HP's Focus on Experiences means that with regard to products, we now have excellent wireless solutions and a promising Internet appliance (I'm not entirely sure what that means...). Their innovation continues and along with Intel's invention, I'm sure that we will see new products in the future 6d1f23a050
